At the corner of Main Street and Elm Street, there was a tall flagpole that stood proud and tall. Every day, the flag would wave in the wind, and the people passing by would stop and salute it.

One day, a firefighter came rushing down Main Street in his firetruck. He was on his way to put out a fire at a nearby building. As he drove past the flagpole, he couldn't help but feel a sense of pride for his country.

After the fire was out, the firefighter drove back to the flagpole. He quickly grabbed the doorknob of his truck and swung open the door. The firefighter jumped out of his truck onto the sidewalk and saluted the flag very proudly.
