

Once upon a time, in a kingdom far away, there lived a young girl named Rapunzel with magical long, golden hair. She was kept in a tall, hidden tower by an evil witch who wanted to use Rapunzel's hair to stay young and powerful. Rapunzel had never left the tower and spent her days looking out the window, dreaming of the outside world. She loved to sing, and her voice was as beautiful as her hair.

One day, a prince who was passing by the tower heard Rapunzel's lovely singing. Curious, he searched for the door to the tower but found none. Instead, he saw the witch call out, "Rapunzel, Rapunzel, let down your hair," and Rapunzel would let down her long, braided hair for the witch to climb up. The next day, the prince tried the same, and Rapunzel, surprised to see someone new, hesitantly let down her hair. The prince climbed up, and they quickly became friends. He promised to return and free her from the tower.

After many visits, the prince and Rapunzel devised a plan to escape. However, the witch discovered their plan and was angry. So, she cut off Rapunzel's hair and banished her to a faraway desert. When the prince came to rescue Rapunzel, he was confronted by the witch. In his attempt to escape, he fell from the tower and was blinded.

Despite these hardships, the prince wandered for years until he finally heard Rapunzel's familiar singing. They were joyfully reunited, and Rapunzel's tears of happiness magically restored his sight. Together, they returned to the prince's kingdom, where they lived happily ever after.
